Oct. 12--Calling themselves the new Internet travel "dream team," a group of online travel experts has launched a Norwalk-based Web site to take on the companies they helped develop into industry giants. Former executives from Travelocity, Orbitz, Expedia and Intuit have created Kayak.com, an online travel search site with its headquarters on Marshall Street.

The site offers travelers a look at what's available on 60 Internet travel pages, along with user-created ratings and reviews. Kayak.com's founders include Steve Hafner, co-founder and chief executive officer of Kayak.com and a co-founder of Orbitz Inc. in 1999. "Kayak.com will become the savvy travelers' most useful resource for making informed decisions during their travel planning," Hafner said. "We created the site to meet the needs of today's consumers who are frustrated by having to search multiple sites to find the best deal," Hafner said. "With just one click, visitors to Kayak.com will be able to see prices and services in real-time from over 60 leading travel sites." Hafner touted the fledgling company's MultiBook technology as an opportunity for consumers to choose where to buy their trip. But Kayak.com will have to differentiate itself from other online travel firms to take away business from major players like Orbitz, Expedia and Travelocity, said travel expert Laura Powell.

Travel agents can earn 15 percent commission and two free places for booking a group of 30 paying passengers to Ireland on CIE Tours International's new group program for travel from November 2003 through April 2004. Smaller groups can earn commission of 14 percent and one free place for a group of 25 paying passengers, and 12 percent commission and one free place for a group of 20 paying passengers.

To assist agents in clinching group sales, CIE has launched a Customized Group Travel Planner outlining six different easy-to-book suggested itineraries for group arrangements to Ireland on Aer Lingus. The itineraries are priced starting at $499 per person departing from New York, Boston or Baltimore for a three-night, fully escorted tour. Prices include air fare, accommodations at first-class or superior first-class hotels in rooms with private baths/showers, most meals and sightseeing. For more information, call 800-CIE-TOUR or visit the Web site (www.cietours.com).

ABSTRACT: According to A Study of the Incentive Merchandise and Travel Marketplace, 35% of total budgets for motivational items will increase this year. Despite the sunny outlook depicted by the study, the coming months still present a challenge to the incentive industry. While some companies may opt to cut off their incentive arm, others are being reorganized or sold to an organization that does not subscribe to the incentive theory. Ways that businesses are finding the right balance between cutting costs and motivating employees are discussed. For example, many companies are now offering trips closer to home, and shorter trips are becoming more common.

7 Pitfalls of incentive travel planning

ABSTRACT: Travel planning can be a minefield if you do not know what you are doing. But can you claim victory just because you averted disaster? If only success came so easily. There is more to a great incentive program than ease of execution, but trouble is not always easy to pinpoint. And mastery of one type of planning does not mean you have conquered them all. So before embarking on your next project, learn what the experts have to say about the pitfalls that may be sabotaging your programs.

ABSTRACT: A study aims to identify the important travel agency selection factors in relation to choosing a travel agency for all-inclusive package tours, as perceived by Hong Kong consumers. Results showed that agency reputation was rated as the most important attribute in travel agency selection, followed by word-of-mouth communication and staff attitude.

Incentive Gift Certificate Supplement PP: 1-48 Feb 1999 ISSN: 1042-5195

ABSTRACT: Gift certificates' popularity as an incentive award is not hard to figure out. First and foremost, they offer choice. Recipients can choose exactly what they want when they want it, whether it is during a Saturday afternoon visit to the mall, quiet time with a cup of coffee or tea and a retailer's catalog or an evening surfing the Web. Many gift certificate suppliers are major department stores. For incentive managers, gift certificates provide an equally impressive array of advantages. Because they come in different denominations, they work well for tiered programs and contests. A listing of suppliers is presented.

SOUTHLAKE, Texas, Oct. 13 /PRNewswire-FirstCall/ -- Sabre Travel Network today announced that corporate and leisure travel agency James TravelPOINTS has switched to the Sabre global distribution system (GDS) to book travel. Migration to the Sabre GDS has been completed and travel agents in the company's Boulder and Ft. Collins, Colorado, offices are using the system to help expand their business.

"One of the key reasons we switched to the Sabre GDS was due to their recent long-term airline agreements that provide us the ability to book Web fares on the six largest domestic airlines," said Don James, president of James TravelPOINTS. "In our evaluation, Sabre Travel Network is also ahead of the pack with technology. They have more to offer when it comes to products, tools and features. We also found that the Sabre GDS was the only system that can provide us with the ability to book travel on Southwest Airlines."

Historically, Korean outbound travel to the U.S. has posted robust growth averaging 26.1 percent in 1997 when Korea's financial crisis resulted in an IMF rescue program, this trend was reversed. When 4,542,159 Koreans traveled abroad that year, the number represented a minus 2.3 percent growth rate for overall outbound Korean travel, a negative growth rate for the first time ever. This new trend also was dramatically contrary to the exploding traditional double-digit growth of Korea's outbound travel segment exhibited since 1989 when the Korean government first liberalized overseas travel.

Notwithstanding Korea's current economic difficulties, including the sharp decline of the Korean currency, and despite on-going frugality campaigns which sometimes target outbound tourism, the number of Korean business and convention travelers to the U.S. probably will not drop significantly over the medium term. Industry sources predict that unlike other overseas destinations, the U.S. will remain one of the largest benefactors of Korean outbound travel since a significant portion of Korean travelers to the U.S. fall within the "business travel" category. For the first half of 1998, 115,664 Korean business people visited the U.S., a 17.5% decrease over the same period last year. However, this figure still represents 62 percent of total outbound tourism to the U.S. for that period, an indication that business travel is a segment not expected to sharply decline compared to pleasure/VFR (visit friends/relatives) travel to the U.S.

ABSTRACT: Ohio Travel and Tourism Div Dir George Zimmerman says that regionalism is the key to promoting increased group tourism in Ohio and other Midwestern states. Six neighboring states participated in the third Heartland Showcase held in Dayton in Feb 1994. Within Ohio, counties are cooperating in efforts to market their special tourist attractions. Zimmerman says that Ohio's toll-free telephone number received 1.15 million calls in 1993 in response to television ads promoting tourism in Ohio. A listing of attractions in various Ohio cities is presented.

ABSTRACT: Executives must keep in mind that their secretaries may not be prepared to deal with the complexities and intricacies of business travel planning. An awareness of the secretaries' limitations could alleviate any undesirable experiences of executives resulting from inefficient business travel arrangements. Executives should seek to augment their secretaries', as well as their own, knowledge of business travel. Travel agencies can provide the necessary information and services for planning business trips and thus serve as a vital support to any in-house travel arrangement efforts.

ABSTRACT: The Official Airline Guides' (OAG) directory of airline schedules is the most visible service, but OAG is also the world's largest clearinghouse of travel data. OAG supplies airline schedule and other related data to all computer reservation systems used by airlines and other organizations around the world. Mel Trudeau, CIO of OAG, is one of the new breed of CIOs. He came up from a position as technologist, and part of his job as CIO is new business development. As a former end-user, Trudeau is a much more service-oriented CIO. End users, Trudeau acknowledges, often perceive I/S as being inflexible, and he hopes to change that perception. OAG is primarily a paper-based organization, Trudeau reports, but they are positioned to move into the electronic arena. OAG was an early adapter of electronic forms, but the process has been slow to become accepted. Wireless may be an important part of OAG's strategy to deliver services electronically.
